

Bill Gittins

Bill Gittins began painting 30 years ago as a means of relaxation. His studio and plein air paintings now hang regionally, nationally and internationally among private, business and permanent collections. "I must paint what feels emotionally good to me...to find a calming entrance into the painting before I start and a continuing feeling of belonging there as I paint the scene. As a symbol of that, you will often find simple paths, trails or roads in my work...leading somewhere... just as life does."
